Q4

Do you have any other comments?

I would like to know how likely it is considering the last few years of “unpredictable and unlikely high amounts of rain” (considering it’s been an on going issue for years and years, no rainfall over 20mm per day should be considered high amounts of rain now days, but yet that is about the amount it needs to cause a boil water notice. Taking that into consideration. How much can the new system take before we get put on boil water notice. There is no point upgrading if we are under constant boil water notices.
